

Where does this funding come from?

Per RCW 71.24.580, Cowlitz County receives funds from the Washington State Healthcare Authority (HCA), Criminal justice treatment account (CJTA).

What services can be provided with this funding?

Funding can be used for substance use disorder treatment and treatment support services for offenders with a substance use disorder against whom charges have been filed. Funding can also be used for substance use disorder treatment services and treatment support services for nonviolent offenders within a drug court program as well as for the administrative and overhead costs associated with the operation of drug court.

As required by law, Cowlitz County has a local CJTA panel consisting of the county prosecutor, county sheriff, county superior court, a substance abuse treatment provider, a member of the criminal defense bar, a representative of the county's drug court, and a member of the Human Services staff. The panel establishes a local CJTA plan to describe coordination and leveraging of services in the County and to ensure the intended population is reached with CJTA funds. The CJTA plan can be viewed at: www.co.cowlitz.wa.us/cjtaplan.
